Understanding and Treating Co-occurring Disorders

LADAC Credit: 6 hrs. – Elective Education

Millions of people suffer from co-occurring substance dependency and mental health issues. Co-occurring disorders can complicate the assessment, treatment and recovery process. Some of the more prevalent mental health disorders that co-occur with substance dependency include depression, anxiety, posttraumatic stress disorder and personality disorders. This training will explore key issues in the area of differential diagnostic assessment, integrated treatment strategies, and address on going recovery needs for individuals with co-occurring disorders.

The presenter, Susan M. Hoisington, PsyD, LP, is the Executive Director of Hazelden's Clinical Services. Hazelden is known for its high quality addiction treatment, particularly in the area of co-occurring disorders, and recovery services as well as education, research, and publishing products.
